Dear Sir:-

Responding to your letter of August 7th I regret to advise that I do not know of any lists of medals relating to the present war, which have been struck in this country. It however your query has to do with medals struck in Europe, an American coin dealer has published a number of catalogues which describe and illustrate many of these medals, and I know of nothing which more nearly approaches completeness than these catalogues. These may be had from J. S. Bouchard, 121 West 4th St., Rochester, N. Y. - the first printed catalogue Nos. 11, 12, 13 and 14. There may be others. If your correspondence comes to call at our library we shall be glad to show these records to him. I regret that we do not have magazines in which even I should be only too happy to send one to you.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
INTER-LIBRARY LOANS

MEMORANDUM

Under the system of inter-library loans the Library of Congress will lend certain books to other libraries for the use of investigators engaged in serious research. The loan will rest on the theory of a special service to scholarship which it is not within the power or the duty of the local library to render. Its purpose is to aid research calculated to advance the boundaries of knowledge, by the loan of unusual books not readily accessible elsewhere.

The material lent can not include, therefore, books that should be in a local library, or that can be borrowed from a library (such as a state library) having a particular duty to the community from which the application comes; nor books that are inexpensive and can easily be procured; nor books for the general reader, mere text-books, or popular manuals; nor books where the purpose is ordinary student or study-club work, or for mere self-instruction.

Nor can it include material which it is constant use at Washington, or whose loan would be an inconvenience to Congress, or to the Executive Departments of the Government, or to reference readers in the Library of Congress. These conditions would as a rule exclude from the loan system genealogies, local histories, newspapers and periodicals.

Material which by reasons of its size or its character requires expensive packing or high insurance can be sent only in exceptional cases.

Music is lent on the same conditions as books. Musical scores so lent, however, can not be used for public performances.

A library in borrowing a book is understood to hold itself responsible for the safe-keeping and return of the book at the expiration of 10 days from its receipt. An extension of the loan for a like period is granted, upon request, whenever feasible. The borrowing library is expected to apply to the material borrowed the same safeguards that it would apply to material of its own, requiring to be used only on its premises that which it would not itself lend for use outside.

All expenses of carriage are to be met by the borrowing library.

Books will be forwarded by express (charges collect) whenever this conveyance is deemed necessary for their safety. Certain books, however, can be sent by mail, but it will be necessary for the borrowing library to remit in advance a sum sufficient to cover the postal charges, including registry fee.

The Library of Congress has no fund from which charges of carriage can be prepaid.

General observation: Subject to the limitations indicated above, the Library of Congress welcomes applications for loans coming properly within the intent and purpose of the system. It must emphasize, however, that its ability to deal promptly and effectively with such requests will often depend upon the clearness and definiteness of the applications. Those requiring research to identify the material needed or to select items responsive to the need must yield precedence to specific requests for particular works.

The inter-library loan system is intended merely to complement the resources of the local library, but not to supply the major part of the material needed for any extended research. When a particular investigation involves the examination of a large group of books, the loan system should not be expected to meet the need.

Dear Sir:

During Dr. Putnam's absence in Europe, I am acting as temporary Chairman of the Louvain Library Committee, the immediate object of which is to gather material for the rehabilitation of the Louvain Library.

About twenty thousand volumes have been collected in London and Manchester. Certainly, we can do as well and better in the United States. We have already secured the promise of thousands of interesting duplicates from the following University Libraries:

Chicago,	Cornell,	Illinois,	Pennsylvania,
Columbia,	Harvard,	Leland Stanford,	Yale.

And we have by no means begun to cover the field. Do you have any duplicates which you feel disposed to give to Louvain? If so, could you send me a list of them? We are building up here at the Library of Congress a union catalogue of all gifts accepted or offered. This will enable us to avoid duplication.

Thus far, most of the material accepted has been along conservative lines, - history, literature (especially foreign), fine arts, philosophy and religion. Science is not very well represented as yet.

We hope to interest all the University Presses of the country and will get a good collection of doctoral theses. Columbia is giving a complete set of its theses, about two thousand in number.

Very sincerely yours,

It is a large volume, consisting chiefly of handsome plates, and would require special packing. We hesitate therefore to send it out of the building. (See enclosed circular.)

The second item which you request,- the Duc de Luynes' "Nouvelles annales de l'Institut archéol. de Rome" sect. française, tome 1, 1836, pp. 383, ff.,- is not found in our catalogues, so the Superintendent of the Reading Room states.

The Appeal for the Restoration of the Library of Louvain

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE LIBRARIAN

October 25, 1919

Dear Sir:

In defining the material urgently desired for the rehabilitation of their Library, the authorities of the University of Louvain have emphasized the publications of the Learned Societies of the United States. For a library of research touching every field of scientific investigation, those issued by your Society should of course be indispensable.

Have you not an available set which could be granted for the purpose—or if not a complete set, a copy of at least the most important—including the latest annual report, proceedings and transactions, and also as many as possible of the earlier ones? In so far as your stock in hand is exhausted, could you not supplement it by an appeal to your members?

We trust so, indeed; and have been so confident of your disposition in the matter that we have ventured to guarantee it in advance, feeling sure that the Learned Societies of America would not be behind those of other countries either in recognizing the claim upon their generosity or the opportunity to assure an adequate representation of their own contributions to knowledge in such a center of research.

The Smithsonian Institution has undertaken to forward through the International Exchange Service any material contributed. It may therefore be addressed directly to the Institution at Washington.

As, however, a catalogue of the contributions is being compiled here at the Library of Congress, we should have a list (itemized) of those sent to the Smithsonian direct.

The packages should be strongly wrapped or boxed and plainly marked "The Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., for the University of Louvain."

If I do not add any explanation as to the project itself, this is because to you or to your membership such an explanation would be superfluous. You know what Louvain was; you know of the destruction of its Library; and you need not be urged to sympathy with the task of our Committee in undertaking to restore it.

Very truly yours,

Librarian of Congress
for the Committee

Secretary of the American Numismatic and Archaeological Society,

Dear Sir:-

In response to your letter of October 25th regarding such contribution of our publications as this Society might care to make for the library of the University of Louvain, I beg to advise that our Council at its last meeting directs me to offer you for this purpose, subject to your acceptance, volumes X to date, II, of our Journal together with a small number of additional volumes and pamphlets which have been published by us from time to time. Will you kindly advise me whether you would consider such as coming within the scope of the desired material, and by what means the package should be forwarded to Washington, or whether such sending might be obviated by its delivery to a collecting agency of your committee here in New York.

A search of the indices of the Copyright Office fails to disclose registration of this book or the deposit of copies. We write to ask, therefore, whether copyright is claimed upon the book or not. If the work does bear claim of United States copyright, please inform this office when application for registration was made and when the copies required by law were deposited, and by whom.

If they have not been sent, and you will forward a copy of the book, it can be placed upon the shelves of the Library for the use of the public.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

MEMORANDUM

Under the system of inter-library loans the Library of Congress will lend certain books to other libraries for the use of investigators engaged in serious research. The loan will rest on the theory of a special service to scholarship which it is not within the power or the duty of the local library to render. Its purpose is to aid research calculated to advance the boundaries of knowledge, by the loan of unusual books not readily accessible elsewhere.

The material lent can not include, therefore, books that should be in a local library, or that can be borrowed from a library (such as a state library) having a particular duty to the community from which the application comes; nor books that are in print and can easily be procured; nor books for the general reader, mere text-books, or popular manuals; nor books where the purpose is ordinary student or study-club work, or for mere self-instruction. Loans to colleges and universities are customarily limited to books required by members of the faculty in their own investigations.

The loans can not include material which is in constant use at Washington, or whose loan would be an inconvenience to Congress, or to the Executive Departments of the Government, or to reference readers in the Library of Congress. These conditions would, as a rule, exclude from the loan system genealogies, local histories, newspapers and periodicals.

Material which by reasons of its size or its character requires expensive packing or high insurance can be sent only in exceptional cases.

Music is lent on the same conditions as books. Musical scores so lent, however, can not be used for public performances.

A library in borrowing a book is understood to hold itself responsible for the safe-keeping and return of the book at the expiration of 10 days from its receipt. An extension of the loan for a like period is granted, upon request, whenever feasible. The borrowing library is expected to apply to the material borrowed the same safeguards that it would apply to material of its own, requiring to be used only on its premises that which it would not itself lend for use outside. The borrowing library is also expected, in cases of loss or damage, to attend to the details of making replacements.

All expenses of carriage are to be met by the borrowing library.

Books will be forwarded by express (charges collect).

The Library of Congress has no fund from which charges of carriage can be prepaid.

General observation: Subject to the limitations indicated above, the Library of Congress welcomes applications for loans coming properly within the intent and purpose of the system. It must emphasize, however, that its ability to deal promptly and effectively with such requests will often depend upon the clearness and definiteness of the applications. Those requiring research to identify the material needed or to select items responsive to the need must yield precedence to specific requests for particular works.

The inter-library loan system is intended merely to complement the resources of the local library, but not to supply the major part of the material needed for any extended research. When a particular investigation involves the examination of a large group of books, the loan system should not be expected to meet the need.

DEAR SIR:

Action can not yet be taken upon your application for registration of the work named below for the reason that it is not certain in whose name the claim of copyright should stand upon the records of this Office, because of the variance between the name of the claimant as it is given in the application and as it is printed in the notice of copyright in the work.

The law contemplates that claims to copyright shall be recorded only in the true name of the actual claimant. We will therefore ask you to state exactly the name in which the claim should be recorded (namely, the true name of the legal owner of the copyright).

While the notice on the copies reads: "Copyright by" The American Numismatic Society the name given in the application is James A. Reynolds

If this is the correct name to be recorded as the owner of the copyright, please inform us to that effect so that your copyright business may be completed.

If the name given in the application is not the correct name of the claimant, please fill out a new application on the inclosed form.

PROJECT B
SPECIAL COLLECTIONS

April, 1923.

To the Libraries of the American Library Association:

In the matter of Special Collections in American Libraries:

The practical value of a list of special collections in American Libraries was first demonstrated concretely by Mr. Wm. C. Lane. The Johnston-Mudge list of 1912 established such a list as a recognized and indispensable tool.

Repeated demand for a new edition of this and many partial contributions to the problem, especially by the Bowker publications, has emphasized the desirability and has led the Library of Congress to establish a vertical file and volume collection of material on this subject with a special card index.

Meantime the development of the A.L.A. plan for meeting the needs of American research workers reached the point where some handy list for practical use had to be prepared at once. A printed index to the Johnston-Mudge, the A.L.A. Survey, the American Library Annual and other existing printed and manuscript lists was therefore prepared by this Committee as a practical basis for corrections and additions.

The Librarian of Congress, having had the good fortune to secure funds from Mr. John D. Rockefeller and the services of Dr. Wm. Dawson Johnston as editor, is now in position to produce immediate service results if the cordial cooperation of the libraries is ensured, and this committee has ventured to assure him of such cooperation. It ventures, therefore, to ask this of you, with more than usual confidence.

All that is strictly necessary is (1) the subject of each collection (2) its name, if it has one, and (3) the number of volumes which it contains, (4) any unusual features.

Contributions of clippings, manuscript information, pamphlets and volumes, describing more fully the respective collections are, however, also desired for the L.C. files - the more and fuller, the better.

If your library is already represented in the provisional printed index you will find attached to this request the printed memorandum of your collection as gleaned from present sources.

Please furnish memoranda for each collection on a separate standard card giving: Subject, name of Library, name of collection, number of volumes, pamphlets, etc., city, state.

The idea of a special collection is that it contains a certain number of books not found in the average library or the average library of its class. A collection on mathematics may number several thousand and not be special, while a score of unusual works in the history of mathematics or of original editions of any mathematician may constitute a special collection. The more highly specialized the collection the better. Most libraries have some group of unusual works. Even small local libraries often have important collections on native writers or sons distinguished in war, public life, art or other fields of service.

The committee asks for typical A.L.A. cooperation in this matter--not a prolonged and expensive effort, but an immediate contribution of what can be given without much special effort and the keeping of the matter in mind so that, if any new collections are added, memorandum shall be sent to the Library of Congress.

Please address communications to: ~~Numismatic Soc. L. (2,500v., 10,000pp. Tab. 100v., 6,000pp. SpL 25) New York, N.Y.~~

The Library of Congress,

Gentlemen:

Your communication of special collections in American libraries, is at hand. The importance of the material in this library, must serve as an excuse for the length of the paragraph below:

At present, there are about five thousand bound volumes in our library, including the periodical literature of the subjects -- " numismatics -- including Medals and Decorations of Honor " Most of these periodicals have had the important articles analyzed. There are in addition, ten thousand unbound pamphlets fully analyzed. Approximately three thousand Foreign Auction Catalogues, and an equal number of American Auction Catalogues, indexed by owner, and date and partially by material. There is also a file of more than thirty thousand reproductions of Greek coins and ten thousand Roman coins properly classified.

I hope this information will meet your need.

Very truly yours,

Secretary.

W. Dawson Johnston, Esq.,

Dear Sir:

Responding to yours of June 4th, I am enclosing two circulars briefly descriptive of our Museum and its collection. Although I am assuming that your letter has reference to books dealing with coins, medals, and decorations, lest that assumption be a mistaken one, I would state for your information that our collection of coins covers the entire field of coinage and through collections deposited in the building on loan, is one of the strongest in the Western Hemisphere. Our collection of medals is thoroughly representative, but especially strong in the work of American sculptors and weak in Renaissance medals. Our collection of decorations and war medals is one of the most representative on exhibition anywhere.

If your query was restricted to books on these subjects, our library consists of between 3,000 and 6,000 bound volumes, including all of the important periodicals on this subject, and both are fully indexed by author and subject - in the majority of cases, the articles in the periodicals are analyzed. The pamphlet collection is large, and the collection of foreign and American coin auction catalogues is not surpassed elsewhere. In addition, we have a file of between 30,000 and 40,000 classified illustrations of Greek coins.

I shall be glad to give you further information if this does not meet your need.

Secretary

My dear Mr. Noe,

I have delayed replying to your letter of May 1, until a very thorough search could be made for the laws that you desire.

I have been unable to locate the decree of Chile creating the Order of Merit. and am wondering if the year 1910 you quote is the right one. Can you check over your reference for this date? In the "Memorial del Ministro de Relaciones Exteriores", Santiago, 1929, the regulations for enforcing the provisions of the Decree are printed but no reference is made to the decree itself. The regulations cover about 4 pages.

The decree of 1921 of Peru creating the Order of the Sun is published in "El Peruano", Lima, issue for May 31, 1921, p.611, and the one for the Cross and Medal for Socabaya, 1836, appears in the "Colección de Leyes y decretos" of Peru, 1836, p.228.

Our collections do not include the laws of Bolivia for 1872, and I do not locate any decree on the Order of the Star of Abdon Calderon among the laws and decrees of Ecuador for 1905.

Very truly yours,

Chas. E. Babcock

Dear Sir:

In response to your request of June 6, we take pleasure in enclosing an estimate of the cost of a photostatic copy of the item* noted below (60 cents for the positive print including the negative, or 35 cents for the negative alone).

As you will see, this estimate has been secured from E. P. Secker, Inc., a concern here in Washington which has done much work of this kind for our correspondents. Should you decide to place your order with Mr. Secker, kindly communicate with him direct, - his address being 1016 National Press Building. Remittance should of course be made to him and not to the Library of Congress.

Very truly yours,
